

Boardroom Breakfast with Nse Esema
Senior Vice President
New York City Economic Development Corporation
(Speaker Bio)

Nse Esema is the Senior Vice President of the Green Economy team at New York City Economic Development Corporation (NYCEDC) where she leads a team focused on fostering the growth of climate related industries in NYC through inclusive, equitable economic development. Prior to her current role, Nse focused on establishing NYC as a global hub for the OSW industry with a core commitment to centering equity.

Earlier in the year, Nse led the implementation and introduction of the NYCEDC's Green Economy Action Plan, which outlines a strategic roadmap aiming to create nearly 400,000 green jobs by 2040. The work that Nse has done in building stronger municipal green economic initiatives has been recognized by the City and State New York, celebrating her efforts by naming her an esteemed "Trailblazer in Clean Energy."

Before her career at NYCEDC, she worked with city governments in Africa and North America in developing and implementing multi-stakeholder resilience building strategies. Nse Esema earned a Masters in City Planning degree from MIT.